ANNE WILKINSON, LEED AP

Principal

Anne Wilkinson's calling was revealed to her through her first love, dance. The leap from performing arts to theater and lighting design was natural, with hotel and residential interiors a natural progression. As she says, "Hotels are a stage set with the guests as players and the interiors setting the mood, acting as backdrop for irreplaceable experiences."

A New York native, Anne earned her Bachelor of Science in Design & Environmental Analysis from Cornell University. After launching her career at Gensler and working for a theater design consultancy in New York, Anne moved to San Francisco to pursue residential and hospitality design. Named Principal of BAMO in 2017, Anne has contributed to the growth and success of the firm since its inception as the firm's very first employee.

Anne acknowledges that ballet ultimately taught her many of the values essential to success as a designer: rigor and discipline, but also how to determine what line will be the most beautiful one. Eternally in search of what makes each destination unique, she infuses a marked sense of style and place into her elegant and cohesive designs. Her passion for capturing the essence of singular beauty attracts her to integrating unique pieces made with artistry and craftsmanship that further the vision.

With a design portfolio that spans the globe, Anne's latest endeavor is the Four Seasons Hotel in São Paulo, opening in 2018. Soon after, she will unveil the coveted Capella Bangkok hotel on the banks of the Chao Phraya River. Anne is a LEED Accredited Professional. Her work has been featured in Interior Design and Hospitality Design magazines.
